

Website UI Specification 2.1

A page-by-page visual reference of the live site, with design/colour notes and corrected details — for client review.

Prepared by: GESA Platform Team

Site: gesa-platform.vercel.app

Original capture date: September 8, 2026 · Revision date: September 8, 2026

Revision notes: corrected page-route references, added design/colour notes under every landing-page sample, reframed the gold-thread logo studies as future-design options, added missing section numbers 13–15 to the contents list, and flagged one new review item (see the Notes for Review appendix).

About

Home page — reached via the “About” item in the top navigation. (GESA’s nav labels are intentionally relabelled from their underlying routes: the item reading “About” links to the site’s actual homepage, “/”, while the item reading “Find Support” links to the page described in section 02. This swap is a deliberate content decision, not a routing error.)

Three reference mock-ups for this page

SUPERSEDED DESIGN

Mock-up 1 of 3 — an earlier design pass, kept here for design history only.

SUPERSEDED DESIGN

Mock-up 2 of 3 — an interim iteration, also superseded.

Design & colour notes: same three-card layout on a dark charcoal band, but with the cards labelled RESILIENCE / VETERANS / SUPPORT rather than the site’s current WAR / TERROR / DISASTER labelling shown in the live capture below. This is an intermediate naming pass the pathway cards went through before landing on their current labels — not a design the live site has ever shipped as final.

LIVE CAPTURE

Full-page capture of the live site.

FLAGGED FOR REVIEW

This particular capture appears to pre-date the site's most recent updates: its hero band renders in dark navy rather than the site's current light slate-blue banner (compare against section 02's capture below, which shows the up-to-date tone), and the DISASTER card's mark still shows its earlier navy/red/gold recolour rather than the newer purple/teal/peach palette. Recommend a fresh capture of this page before this document is shared externally.

Structure & sections

This is the site's landing page. The header carries the primary navigation (About, Find Support, Our Professionals, Community), a Donate button, a notification bell, a language switcher, and an account menu — repeated on every page in this document. Below it sits a hero band (using the site's shared banner treatment, currently a light slate-blue — see the flagged note above for why this capture shows it darker) with an eyebrow tag, a headline, supporting copy, a three-item trust line, and the three-card “Where would you like to begin?” pathway grid, each card showing a small framed mark, a gold category badge, and a caption. Below that, a sage-green trust strip (Verified Profiles / Multilingual Support / Clear Session Fees / Global Community) leads into a dark closing band with two CTAs and a crisis-support link.

Design & colour notes

The three pathway cards use GESA's recurring “framed artwork” motif: a wood-grain gold border, a cream mat, and a solid-colour canvas (light sky-blue, sage-olive, and blue-grey) holding a recoloured version of the GESA crescent mark. The gold category badge above each frame and the sage-green (“--accent”) icon circles in the trust strip below are the two accent colours the whole page is built from; the closing band reuses the same deep-navy (“--espresso”) surface used for closing bands on Find Support, Community, and Donate, which is what visually ties those four pages together as one family.

Find Support

The site's About-page content, served at /find-your-therapist — reached via the “Find Support” item in the top navigation. (The older /about URL still works and now redirects permanently to this page, rather than being a second, separate destination.)

Emotional support should feel human, accessible and within reach.

GESA was created to bring people and professionals together across languages, cultures and borders, creating meaningful pathways for support, growth and connection.

BE PART OF THE MOVEMENT

Structure & sections

Opens with a headline, supporting copy, an “AI Matching” primary CTA (opens the matching modal covered in section 13) and a “Join the Movement” secondary CTA, beside a framed GESA mark graphic. Below that, a “How GESA works” four-card row (Verified volunteer therapists, Up to six free sessions, Thoughtful matching, Global reach) leads into a founder spotlight, a plain tagline/CTA band, a “Team & Advisors” row, and the same dark closing CTA band used elsewhere on the site.

Design & colour notes

The hero uses the site's shared light slate-blue banner (“--slate-banner”) — this capture shows the tone the whole “gold-banner” family of hero bands is meant to share across the site (see the flagged note in section 01). The founder spotlight switches to a warm gold/sand wash (“--sand-brown”), the same tone reused on Our Professionals' directory band and Community's “Why GESA exists” band — one of the few colours deliberately repeated across otherwise-different pages to tie them together.

Our Professionals

/therapists

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

The therapist directory. A gold page-header band sits above a two-column layout: a left-hand filter sidebar (name search, therapist-type list, language dropdown, session-duration and gender toggles, plus a "Join us as a therapist" CTA) and a responsive card grid on the right. Each therapist card shows a photo, name, specialty, language tags, and Book a Session / Message actions. The page ends with a dark closing band repeating the donation call to action.

Design & colour notes

This is the one page where the gold/sand tone ("--sand-brown") is used as a full page background rather than a single band, which is why it reads noticeably warmer than every other page in this document. The filter sidebar and therapist cards sit on plain white/ivory panels for contrast against that background, and the primary actions (Choose a date and time) use the same deep-navy pill button as every other primary CTA site-wide, so the page still reads as part of the same system despite the different backdrop.

Online

Structure & sections

Opens with a hero band (eyebrow, headline, supporting copy, two CTAs, and a tagline row), followed by a gold “Why GESA exists” statement band and a three-card “Choose your pathway” grid. Below that sits a preview grid of six community support-group cards, each showing a status chip (Online / In-person / Coming Soon) and short description, and the page closes with a “Stories of Healing” testimonial row of three quotes.

Design & colour notes

The hero here uses the same light slate-blue banner as Find Support (section 02) — a useful side-by-side check that the shared banner token is rendering consistently between the two pages. The “Why GESA exists” band reuses the warm gold/sand tone from Our Professionals and Find Support's founder spotlight, and the six support-group cards sit on a dark charcoal surface with a thin gold rule under each title, the same “dark card on a light page” treatment used for the closing bands elsewhere in this document, just repeated six times in a grid rather than once at full width.

Donate

/donate

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

Opens with an eyebrow tag, headline and supporting copy, plus a primary CTA. The centrepiece is a bordered donation panel: a Give Once / Give Monthly toggle, four preset amounts (€25 / €50 / €100 / Custom), helper copy, and a “Make my gift” button. Below that, a three-card “What your gift helps make possible” grid (Access, Connection, Continuity) explains the impact, and the page closes with a dark “One choice can carry support across the world” band.

Design & colour notes

Donate is deliberately the plainest page in this document — no gold hero band at all, just the site's default ivory background (“--background”) throughout, so the eye goes straight to the bordered donation panel rather than a decorative backdrop. The closing band still reuses the same deep-navy “--espresso” surface as Home, Find Support, and Community's closing CTAs, which is what keeps Donate feeling like part of the same site rather than a separate checkout flow.

Footer

Global footer — present at the bottom of every page on the site

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

The shared footer used across the entire site. It carries the GESA brand mark and tagline, three link columns (Explore, Support, Legal), and an inline “Help us grow” contact form (name, phone, subject dropdown, email, an age/privacy consent checkbox, and a submit button). A social-icon row and a “Trusted Partners” strip run along the bottom.

Design & colour notes

The one consistently dark-background surface on the site: deep-navy (“--espresso”) throughout, with the gold “DONATE” link picked out in the Support column as the one warm accent against all that cool navy and light-grey link text. The “Help us grow” form sits in its own slightly-lighter navy card so its input fields read clearly against the darker page background around it.

Privacy Policy

/privacy-policy

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

A long-form legal page in 13 numbered sections: scope, who GESA is, data collected, how data is used, legal bases for processing, data sharing, international transfers, retention, user rights, children and minors, security measures, policy updates, and a contact section.

Design & colour notes

A plain narrow single-column layout on the site's default ivory background, with no illustrative imagery — the same minimal, distraction-free treatment shared by all five legal pages, so the legal text itself is what the visitor reads rather than a designed layout competing for attention. Each section heading is written in the source content as a Markdown-style “###” marker; see item 1 in the Notes for Review appendix for how that currently renders on the live page.

Cookies Policy

/cookies-policy

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

A shorter legal page in 7 numbered sections: what the policy covers, what cookies are, the categories of cookies used (essential, functional, analytics, marketing), why they're used, third-party tools, how visitors manage cookie preferences, and a contact line.

Design & colour notes

A plain narrow single-column layout on the site's default ivory background, with no illustrative imagery — the same minimal, distraction-free treatment shared by all five legal pages, so the legal text itself is what the visitor reads rather than a designed layout competing for attention. Each section heading is written in the source content as a Markdown-style “###” marker; see item 1 in the Notes for Review appendix for how that currently renders on the live page.

Legal Notice

/legal-notice

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

A compact legal page covering organisation and registration details, contact information, the purpose of the website, a “not a medical or emergency service” disclaimer, intellectual property, and a limitation-of-liability section.

Design & colour notes

A plain narrow single-column layout on the site's default ivory background, with no illustrative imagery — the same minimal, distraction-free treatment shared by all five legal pages, so the legal text itself is what the visitor reads rather than a designed layout competing for attention. Each section heading is written in the source content as a Markdown-style “##” marker; see item 1 in the Notes for Review appendix for how that currently renders on the live page.

Accessibility Statement

/accessibility-statement

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

States GES A's accessibility commitment and its WCAG 2.1 Level AA target, lists the measures in place (semantic structure, keyboard navigation, colour contrast, scalable text, alt text, visible focus states, screen-reader support), and gives a contact route for reporting barriers, closing with an "ongoing improvement" note.

Design & colour notes

A plain narrow single-column layout on the site's default ivory background, with no illustrative imagery — the same minimal, distraction-free treatment shared by all five legal pages, so the legal text itself is what the visitor reads rather than a designed layout competing for attention. Each section heading is written in the source content as a Markdown-style "###" marker; see item 1 in the Notes for Review appendix for how that currently renders on the live page.

Terms & Conditions

/terms-and-conditions

Full-page capture of the live site.

Structure & sections

The longest legal page, in 13 numbered sections: acceptance and scope, eligibility, accounts and security, description of services, user conduct, a “not an emergency service” disclaimer, intellectual property, third-party links, warranty disclaimer and liability limits, indemnity, termination, governing law, and how changes to the terms are communicated.

Design & colour notes

Accessibility Adjustments

Accessibility widget — opened via the floating launcher icon on any page

Full-page capture of the live site.

Floating launcher

Structure & sections

A floating panel rather than a page of its own. It offers a language selector, a set of “Content modules” toggles (font size, line height, readable font, big cursor, letter spacing, text alignment, font weight), and “Color modules” toggles (light contrast, high contrast) below.

Design & colour notes

A calm, low-contrast cream panel deliberately quieter than the rest of the site's UI, so the widget doesn't compete visually with the page it's adjusting. The floating launcher icon reuses the sage-green (“--accent”) and gold (“--clay”) ring from the site's badge system, and the panel's active toggle state (Default/On) is picked out in deep navy, the same colour used for every primary button site-wide.

AI Matching Support, Step 1 of 4 — Your preferences.

Structure & sections

A four-step modal wizard (Preferences → Format & Location → Feelings → Matches). Step 1 asks for an optional preferred treatment type, therapist gender preference, and preferred language, then hands off to location/format, a short free-text feelings prompt, and finally a results screen of matched professionals.

Design & colour notes

"Preferred treatment type" and "Therapist gender preference" are both single-select pill groups rather than dropdowns: the selected pill (including the "No preference" default) is outlined in deep navy with a pale sage-green fill and a small check mark, so the current selection is legible at a glance without relying on colour alone. "Preferred language" is the one remaining native dropdown on this step. The modal itself sits on a plain light-grey card, keeping the wizard's own controls as the only colour accents on the screen.

21

Structure & sections

A dedicated “find a helpline” page: a country search field, quick links to relevant local helplines, a partner-organisation strip (International Association for Suicide Prevention, Lifeline International, and “1,700+ helplines in over 175 countries”), and three short reassurance points (Quick, Talk with a human, Confidential).

Design & colour notes

Deliberately distinct from the rest of GESA's visual system: a calm blue/teal palette rather than the site's own gold/sage/navy family, and a persistent “Quick Exit” button in the top-right corner in a soft coral/red, the one urgent-toned element on this page and the only place that colour is used at all. This visual separation is intentional — it signals to a visitor in crisis that they've reached a distinct, safety-focused tool rather than another marketing page.

Sample Logos — Future Design Options

Concept studies only — not part of the live site, not adopted, and not currently scheduled for development

FOR DISCUSSION ONLY

The ten images below are exploratory options for a possible future refresh of the GESA mark. They are choices to react to, not a design decision that has been made — nothing here has shipped to the live site, and no development work is planned unless one of these directions is chosen and separately approved.

Design & colour notes

Every option keeps the same underlying shape — the existing three-crescent GESA mark and its dot — and applies a hand-painted gold-leaf texture to it, tested against a mix of backdrops: a pale sand card, a cream card, and a deeper slate-blue card, two of which also add the “GESA / GLOBAL EMOTIONAL SUPPORT ALLIANCE” wordmark beneath the mark. The point of showing several backdrops side by side is to see how the gold leaf’s warmth reads differently against a light versus a darker surface before settling on one combination.

Notes for Review

Issues found while assembling this document — none have been changed as part of putting it together

1. Legal pages render raw Markdown

Privacy Policy, Cookies Policy, Legal Notice, Accessibility Statement and Terms & Conditions all display literal “##” heading markers as plain text instead of rendering them as headings (visible throughout sections 07–11 above). Confirmed in the underlying page component: legal-page body text is rendered as plain preformatted text rather than parsed as Markdown or rich HTML, so the “##” characters that structure each policy's own content show up literally on the page. This is a content-rendering bug, not a copy issue — the underlying text itself is fine.

2. Unfilled placeholder text on Legal Notice

The live Legal Notice page (section 09) shows bracketed template text that was never filled in — for example [street, city, postal code, country], [registration / charity number] and [+xx xxx xxx xxxx]. Confirmed directly in the page's stored content: this is real, live data, not a rendering artifact, and it is visible to real site visitors right now.

3. Home page capture appears out of date (new)

Section 01's “live capture” shows a dark-navy hero band and an earlier navy/red/gold recolour of the DISASTER pathway card's mark, while sections 02 and 04's captures (taken from pages that share the exact same hero-band styling) show the site's current lighter slate-blue tone. This points to section 01's screenshot having been taken before the most recent round of colour updates reached this page, or before that deploy finished rolling out. Recommend re-capturing the Home page before this document is circulated further, so all five “gold-banner” pages in this document show the same, current banner colour.

Happy to fix any of these on request — no code changes have been made as part of putting this document together.
